

Abstract

Suriaty, S. Psi. "Eclectic Approach in Counseling to Develop the Ability to Build Relationship between Blindman and His Couple's Family"

(vi + 90 pages + P1-P2)

Supervisors: Henny E. Wirawan, M. Hum., Psi., QIA and Sandy Kartasasmita, M. Psi.

When somebody is in marriage relationship, he is not only relate to his couple, but also to his couple's family. In countries, where bonding among families is still strong enough, relating with couple's family could be complicated and unpurposely create inharmonious situation between the couple and the family. This relationship could become worse, if the couple's spouse is blind. In this research, clients are two blindmen between 20-40 years old, who were in conflict with their spouses' family. Research was done by interviewing the clients about their problems and giving intervention by using counseling with eclectic approach. Counseling is used to help clients to build good relationship with their couple's family. Based on the result of the research, counseling with eclectic approach could help the blindman to build good relationship with his couple's family.

Key words: Eclectic Approach, Counseling, Blindman, relationship with Couple's family

Reference: 22 (1983-2011)