

ABSTRACT

ESTER FITRIA (705010020)

Relationship Between Communication And Sexual Satisfaction On Middle Age Women; (Sandi Kartasasmita, M.Psi.); Bachelor Degree Psychology, Tarumanagara University. (1-68 Pages, R1-R4)

The purpose of this research is to find out whether there is any relationship between interpersonal communication and sexual satisfaction on middle age women. The interpersonal communication is one of communication type that happens between two people or more, who make an interactions each other and give a mutualism feedback. Sexual satisfaction defined as a fulfilling of sexual needs as physics and mental. The subject of this research took 100 respondents using convenience-sampling technique. The data was token by questionnaire and processed by SPSS for Windows version 12 program, with Pearson Product Moment correlate, because the data has a normal distribution. These results showed that there is a negative significant correlation between interpersonal communication and sexual satisfaction, with correlation score $r_{xy} = -0.593$, with $p < 0.01$.

Keywords: Interpersonal communication, sexual satisfaction, middle age women