The Purpose of this research is to get an image of psychological well-being of women who had a relationship with married man. This research is based on the theory of Ryff. According to Ryff, psychological well-being is results of evaluation dan psychological positive function someone by fulfilling self-acceptance, purpose of life, environmental mastery, personal growth, positive relations with others and autonomy. Responden in this research are four women in early ages 22-33 years old. The data is taken by interviewing. Result shows the weakest dimension is the environmental mastery and autonomy dimension, because the four subjects can not fulfill thus dimension. In the other hand, the strongest dimension is self-acceptance and purpose of life dimension because there is only one subject that can not fulfill this dimension.
