

ABSTRACT

Frederick (705060086)

Motivation and Self-esteem in Teenage Premarital Sexual Intercourse; (Henny E. Wirawan, M. Hum, Psi., QIA); Indergraduate Program in Psychology, Tarumanagara University, (71 pages; R1-R3; Appendix 1-12).

This research was conducted in order to obtain more in depth information about motivation and self-esteem in teenage premarital sexual intercourse. This research based on the theory of motivation that is McClelland need for affiliation and based on self-esteem theory of Brown. This research conducted by interviewing method, against four teenage girl who end premarital seksual intercourse. This study lefted for none month from January 2010 until October 2010. Research result showed that the four subject are motivated by the need for affiliation and affection. Four subject found to have low self-esteem because of the premarital sexual experience.

Key Words : Motivation, Self-esteem, Premarital Sex Intercourse, Teenage girl