Adolescents who experience psychological well being are those who are able to accept themselves, have positive relations with other, have autonomy, master the environment, have purpose in life, and experience personal growth to deliver them entering the adulthood ages. Adolescents need figure of father for the discipline and decision making. This research involves four subjects who are adolescent that nurtured by stepfather. This research uses interview method, which starts from December 2010 until March 2011. The result shows that three subjects can achieve all dimentions of psychological well being, except one who doesn't achieve dimation of environmental mastery. She can't achieve dimation of environmental mastery because she is more often for being affected by her peers that changes her point of view. Not all of the subject who are nurtured by stepfather, can fell the role of father to achieve psychological well being. So that, it drives subject to seek support from biological mother, peers, and themselves to achieve psychological well being.
