The spectrum of self-concept on young male adult who engaged in sexual relationship with commercial sex worker, (Sandi Kartasasmita, M.Psi). Bachelor Degree, Faculty of Psychology, Tarumanagara University; (40 hlm; P1-P5; L1-L11).

Nowadays a lot of places that provide prostitution services. It is easier to access some of the free sex, especially with the prostitutes (commercial sex workers). The public view it is inappropriate, particularly in individuals who use the services of prostitutes. The purpose of this research is to look at the individual's self-perception of herself, how she looked at other people's perception of herself, called self-concept. The research was conducted by interviewing three subjects. The results of these studies illustrate that individuals who had sexual intercourse with CSWs (commercial sex workers) tend to have a negative self concept.
