

ABSTRACT

Dian Kartiani (705070119)

Description of the individual's perception of interparental conflict terms of parents' marital status; Widya Risnawaty. Undergraduate Program in Psychology, Tarumanagara University, (i-xii; 68 page; P1-P5; L1-L28)

This research intended to see the picture of the individual's perception of unmarried adults beginning on parental views of marital conflict marital status. Looking at the high divorce rate, as well as the conflict between the parents as a child to make people more emotional, aggressive, rough with peers, feel scared and anxious about the future. This study included 139 adult individuals from intact families and early 83 individual adult beginning of divorced families. The author uses the theory Grych, Seid, and Fincham (1992) dimensions of conflict that divides into four sections, namely the Frequency, Intensity, Resolution, and Content. This study used a questionnaire to 22 of the questions. Processing data using descriptive statistics in SPSS ver 15.00. Analysis results indicated that an idea that the conflict in her parents marriage is not a big thing that makes a bad influence on individual perceptions about the conflict marriage adult.

Keywords: , Early Adult, Perception, Marrital Conflict