Commuter marriage is a marriage where the spouses are committed to aligning between families and their careers, living separately in a specified period. This study aims to provide a picture of marriage satisfaction in couples who undergo commuter marriage. Marital satisfaction is a subjective evaluation of the overall quality of an individual marriage. In-depth interviews conducted on two married couples who undergone a commuter marriage. The husband who's doing work outside the domicile. The distance that separates couples between minimal 64.37 kilometers. The technique that the researchers used in the selection of subjects is criterion sampling. Researchers use qualitative research method with phenomenological approach. The results showed that both partners were less satisfied subjects on aspects of intimacy, especially physical intimacy. Both partners will be satisfied on aspects of commitment, congruence, and religious beliefs, if both partners can create transparency in communication.
