Poverty is a global humanitarian problem and became central issues in every country in the world. The poverty itself is a social economic disease which happens in every country, regardless their economic scale.

Poverty is a very important matter in Indonesia, and should be the government's concern, specially in Jakarta. Jakarta as economic measure of Indonesia, are expected to lift Indonesian economic, but in reality, there is so many poverty happens in Jakarta.

Other than economic growth, poverty can be happens because of low education and high unemployment. There isn't many studies that analyze these matters. Therefore, the purpose of this research is to analyze the influence of economic growth, education, and unemployment on poverty in Jakarta on 2003-2016.

This research is using multiple regression method and Eviews software version 9.5. The conclusion of this research is that economic growth, education, and unemployment didn't have significant influence for poverty, whether tested partialy or simultaneously. This conclusion explains that poverty is an complex matter, and multidimensional. So the poverty isn't only about economic, but could be about health, psychology, culture, etc. For further research, the writer hopes that other aspect should be added into the variables, for a better research.
