The Role of Father Whose Child conducting Autistic Behavior; (Sandi Kartasmita, M. Psi); undergraduate Program in Psychology. Tarumanagara University (64 pages; R1-R3).

This research is taken to answer the role of father whose child conducting Autistic Behavior. The interview was held for 7 days started from June 15, 2007 until June 22, 2007. The four subjects of this research are the fathers of Autistic Children whose children are 6-12 years old. From this research it is shown that if a father plays the role as expected and getting involved in the child's day care and developmental, the child whom conducting the autistic behavior shows a great improvement in his behavior. If a father plays the role inconsistently, the child only shows severe changing throughout his behavior. While a child whose father refusing to get involved in the day care and developmental shows consistent autistic behavior.
