SCOPE:

Indonesia Law Review (ILREV) is an open access, double-blind peer-reviewed law journal. It was first published by the Djokosoetono Research Center (DRC) in 2011 to address the lack of scholarly literatures on Indonesian law accessible in English for an international audience.

Realizing the global challenges and ever-increasing legal interaction among developing countries, ILREV initiated a new mission to amplify the voices of the Global South by broadening its focus and scope.

ILREV's broader focus and scope today include, but are not limited to, discourses on legal reform and development, contemporary societal issues, as well as institutional change. By that token, it aims to provide a platform for academic dialogue and exchanges of ideas between scholars and professionals, especially from the Global South. As such, ILREV encourages comparative, multidisciplinary, interdisciplinary, and other approaches to law which can enrich the development of legal scholarship in not only Indonesia but also the Global South as a whole.

Indonesia Law Review is Nationally Accredited (Accreditation Rank I) by the Minister of Research and Technology/National Research and Innovation Agency of the Republic of Indonesia Decision No. 79/E/KPT/2023 on The Accreditation Rank of Scientific Journals Period I of 2023.

Indonesia Law Review is Internationally Accredited by the Scopus since February 2023.

Title: THE PRESERVATION OF MARINE FISHERIES RESOURCES WITHIN ASEAN NATIONS' EEZ
Authors: Ida Kurnia (Faculty of Law, Universitas Tarumanagara, Indonesia)
Status: withdrawn

Summary

The preservation of marine fisheries resources within ASEAN nations' Exclusive Economic Zone (EEZ) is an urgent and pressing challenge requiring collaborative efforts from all ASEAN nations. Challenges such as illegal fishing, climate change, and lack of coordination between ASEAN nations may cause damage to marine biota food chain, especially marine fisheries in Southeast Asia region. To solve this conundrum, collaboration between ASEAN nations pose as the key solution. The research method used in this study is normative juridical approach by analyzing primary legal materials such as International Agreements and other international laws & sources. Further analysis was also conducted from secondary law materials such as international journals and books. It should be noted that the preservation of marine fisheries within ASEAN region has always been a topic that needs to be continuously improved. The urgency to escalate the preservation efforts can be seen in various programs conducted through Ministerial Understanding on Fisheries Cooperation in 1983, as a form of understanding and cooperation between ASEAN nations for the development, management, and conservation of marine fisheries resources within ASEAN EEZ region. Moreover, ASEAN also carried out collaborative efforts for marine fisheries conservation through ASEAN Policy of the General Fisheries Policy Feasibility Study (AGFP). AGFP regulate the ASEAN marine fisheries sector and encompassed 15 focus areas, including marine fisheries resources management, countermeasures against illegal, Unreported and Unregulated (IUU) Fishing, research on marine fisheries, food security, international trade, animal health, conservation of habitat, and management of marine debris and garbage. The policy was ultimately established by the ASEAN nations member as a Working Unit Forum named The ASEAN Sectoral Working Group on Fisheries (ASWGF) to realize the vision and mission of AGFP. Efforts to overcome this challenge are laid out by committing to preserve marine fisheries resources in ASEAN nation's regions, focusing on protecting marine biodiversity – especially marine fisheries resources, encouraging economic and social sustainability, while ensuring food availability and security for the future.

However, there are some input from the review as follow:

1. Please use the Indonesia Law Review (ILREV) writing guidelines for formatting, including margins, indentation, footnotes, and bibliography.
2. - Overall, the substance is quite adequate. However, the review regarding theoretical studies on the form of efforts to conserve marine fisheries resources in the ASEAN countries' Exclusive Economic Zones (EEZs) from a legal perspective. The analysis has been performed adequately. There is a need for further refinement in the analysis section. In this regard, the author needs to elaborate in more detail on the existing conditions regarding the governance of fishery resource: In general, the substance of the manuscript has discussed adequately the connection between the conditions and potentials of fishery resources in the EEZs concerning the problems and solutions to achieve the sustainability of fishery resource. Additionally, it could also elaborate on the efforts of governments in ASEAN countries, including Indonesia, to enhance integrated surveillance systems in these areas by developing more efficient strategies, including technology-based approach.

Dear Ida Kurnia

"THE PRESERVATION OF MARINE FISHERIES RESOURCES WITHIN ASEAN NATIONS' EEZ" has been accepted into Indonesia Law Review.

However, there are some input from the review as follow:

1. Please use the Indonesia Law Review (ILREV) writing guidelines for formatting, including margins, indentation, footnotes, and bibliography.
2. - Overall, the substance is quite adequate. However, the review regarding theoretical studies on the form of efforts to conserve marine fisheries resources in the ASEAN countries' Exclusive Economic Zones (EEZs) from a legal perspective, including the novelty of models that need to be offered, is not sharply discussed. The author only focuses on descriptive explanations. It would be advisable to elaborate on how the conservation efforts discussed by researchers relate to the assurance of fishery resource sustainability, whether this has been achieved or not in terms of existing policies and the models to be proposed by the author. This is important considering the increasingly complex issues in the maritime fisheries sector. The emergence of problems in the fishing area carried out by foreign fishing vessels in the territorial waters of Indonesia and the Indonesian Exclusive Economic Zone poses potential losses for Indonesian fishing vessels.

The analysis has been performed adequately. There is a need for further refinement in the analysis section. In this regard, the author needs to elaborate in more detail on the existing conditions regarding the governance of fishery resources in the EEZs concerning the problems and solutions to achieve the sustainability of these fishery resources, especially from the author's perspective in legal studies. Thus, it should not merely contain manuscripts that are only reviews or summaries.

In general, the substance of the manuscript has discussed adequately the connection between the conditions and potentials of fishery resources in the EEZs concerning the problems and solutions to achieve the sustainability of fishery resources in the EEZs. Some suggestions to strengthen the analysis in the substance of your journal are as follows: it could be supplemented with a brief discussion on the conservation of fishery resources at sea through a regulatory model regarding sustainable fishing, marine spatial planning through fisheries management areas such as in Indonesia, Integrated Coastal Zone Management, as well as policies using blue economy and blue justice approaches. Regarding the regulatory model for fisheries management areas or sustainable fishing, it is also necessary to develop a fisheries management area plan by classifying these areas based on the differences in fishing zones for the needs of industrial and small-scale fishermen. Based on Article 1 paragraph (1) of Government Regulation of the Republic of Indonesia Number 11 of 2023, Sustainable Fishing is defined as "controlled and proportional fishing, conducted in the regulated fishing zones, based on fishing quotas in order to maintain the sustainability of fishery resources and their environment as well as to distribute the national economic growth evenly".

Additionally, it could also elaborate on the efforts of governments in ASEAN countries, including Indonesia, to enhance integrated surveillance systems in these areas by developing more efficient strategies, including technology-based approaches (e.g., through the utilization of vessel monitoring systems). All forms of policies in each ASEAN country developed through the Blue Economy and Blue Justice approaches stem from the understanding that environmental sustainability is a crucial aspect of global economic development and welfare, while also preserving fishery resources in Indonesia. Such discussions can strengthen the urgency or significance of raising the topic of this research.
